Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesian bond market booked positive performance. The index still recorded a positive monthly performance despite the rise in the 10Y yields from 6.57% to 6.59%. The movement was in line with the 10Y UST yield movement which increased significantly from 3.91% to 4.25%. Hotter-than-expected US economic data with US CPI inflation came in stronger than expected and the robust US labor market with jobless claims falling were part of the major drivers of the rising UST yields which broke its YTD high at 4.32%. Other weaker-than-expected US economic data however managed to ease the market concern regarding the possibility of the rate cut delay in 2H24. Domestically, Bank Indonesia held its rates unchanged at 6.00% given manageable inflation. Yields on short tenor bonds decreased, while moderate tenor bonds increased.
