Investment Manager Commentary

Global equity and bond markets did not perform well in May, pressured by higher trade tension between US and China. President Trump showed intention to increase tariffs for goods imported from China if no trade deal is reached soon. To mitigate trade war impact to the economy, US central bank showed a more accommodative stance, prepared to support the economy through its policies. On the domestic side, Indonesia economic fundamentals remain solid, as S&P rating agency raised Indonesia's sovereign rating from BBB- to BBB, supported by strong policy dynamics, low debt level, and manageable fiscal condition. IHSG fell 3.81% in May and Indonesia bond market index fell 0.28%. Rupiah was relatively stable, only depreciated 0.08% to IDR14,268 per USD. Portfolio allocation in equity posted negative performance, while allocation in bonds supported the portfolio in May.
