Investment Manager Commentary

Asia Pacific equity continued its positive trend in August driven by optimism of economic recovery. Global and domestic economic data showed overall improvement, notably from manufacturing, retail, and employment sectors. Covid-19 vaccine development also supported market sentiment. Several vaccines are in phase three of clinical trial, the final phase before approval and production. The market also welcomes US central bank's statement that indicates it is likely to maintain accommodative policy longer than previous expectation. Portfolio allocation in consumer discretionary and consumer staples posted positive attribution, while allocation in IT and communications posted negative attribution.
