Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia equity and bond market fell in March as market sentiment turned negative following Covid-19 outbreak that spread globally. Higher outbreak intensity and various mitigation measures with social distancing or lockdown are expected to have negative impact on economic growth. Indonesia sharia equity index suffered correction 14.52% in March and the bond market fell 5.22%. Rupiah also depreciate 13.9% to 16,310 per USD. To ease the burden on the economy, various governments and central banks introduced big stimulus measures. US government announced USD2 trillion fiscal stimulus, and the Indonesian government also announced IDR405 trillion stimulus, its biggest ever stimulus, in a bid to support the economy. Bank Indonesia also continues its intervention in bond and forex market to stabilize the market. So far these policies managed to calm the market and reduce market volatility. Portfolio allocation in equity posted negative attribution in March, while allocation in bonds supported the portfolio.
