Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia financial market strengthened in November driven by optimism for vaccine development and positive responses on US election results. After months of foreign outflow, foreign investors are starting to reenter Indonesia equity market recording monthly net purchase of IDR3.5 trillion. Strong foreign inflow together with ample domestic liquidity are driving Indonesia bond market. Indonesia 10 years government bond yield drop to 6.2% in the end of November from 6.6% in the end of October. Rupiah strengthened by 3.5%, outperforming other currencies in the region. Amid external and internal stability, Bank Indonesia lowered benchmark rate by 25 basis points to 3.75%. The current account in the third quarter posted a surplus of 0.4% from GDP which is the first surplus since 2011. Portfolio performance was supported by positive attribution from allocation in both equities and bonds.
