Investment Manager Commentary

Asia equity posted positive performance in August following a weak performance the previous month. Market sentiment improves supported by optimism that intensity of regulatory change in China has peaked and valuation has dropped to attractive level. Market sentiment also supported by improvement in COVID-19 cases in several countries in Asia which fueled optimism of economic reopening. The market also responded positive to The Fed's dovish posture as interest rate will remain accommodative despite of stimulus tapering. Korea central bank become the first central bank in Asia to raise interest rate to help curb the country's rising household debt and home prices. Portfolio allocation in industrials and health care contributed positive attribution, meanwhile allocation in energy and materials contributed negative attribution to performance.
