Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia bond market posted positive performance in August supported by the news that the Government and Bank Indonesia agree to extend burden sharing program to 2022. The burden sharing plan is seen as a positive catalyst as it was expected to further ease bond supply risk this year and the next, and help the Government's budget for pandemic relief and economic recovery. Market sentiment also supported by The Fed's accommodative stance. The Fed indicates that interest rate will remain supportive despite of possible stimulus tapering later this year. US Treasury yield was stable that drives investors' appetite to emerging market bonds. Foreign investors posted net buy IDR14.66 in Indonesian bonds, and yield og 10-year government bond dropped from 6.28% to 6.05% in the month. Yields on short and medium tenor bonds fell deeper than long tenors.
