Investment Manager Commentary

Asia market performance varied across the region in April. South Asia and Southeast Asia equity markets were volatile amid rising COVID-19 cases. China equity was weaker amid US - China geopolitical tension, and anti-trust investigation on Chinese technology companies weighed on market sentiment. Meanwhile other North Asia equities such as South Korea and Taiwan posted positive performance supported by IT sector amid rising demand for electronic raw materials. Overall, global sentiment improved in April as US Treasury yield has shown stabilization at 1.5 - 1.6% that provide relief for the markets. Asian economies also showed continued recovery with trade and manufacturing data indicates recovery momentum continues apace. Portfolio allocation in real estate and utilities contributed positive attribution, meanwhile allocation in consumer discretionary and industrials contributed negative attribution to performance.
