Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia equity market was volatile in April, while the bond market was positive. Volatility in the equity market was due to concern regarding rising Covid-19 cases in Asia. Meanwhile the bond market was supported by stabilizing US Treasury 10-year yield that dropped from 1.70% to 1.54% after The Fed reiterated that monetary policy remain accommodative. Regardless of regional sentiment, Indonesia macroeconomic condition improved in April, where GDP for first quarter 2021 showed narrower contraction of 0.7% YoY, from -2.2% YoY the previous quarter, supported by strong net exports as well as improvement in investment and consumption. Inflation remain low at 1.42% YoY, relatively low for Ramadhan month that tend to have spike in inflation. Trade activity is strong, where exports grew 30.5% YoY and imports grew 25.7% YoY. Despite of volatile market condition, both equity and bond allocation in the portfolio posted positive performance.
