Investment Manager Commentary

The financial market was volatile in February. On a positive note, expectation of global economic recovery is stronger as vaccination began globally and the plan of additional USD1.9 trillion from the US. However the market was volatile due to concern that inflation could spike in the US amid stronger recovery that could force The Fed to tighten its monetary policy sooner than expected. On the domestic front, Bank Indonesia cut its benchmark rate from 3.75% to 3.50%. BI and the government also introduced incentives to ease credit for property and automotive vehicles in a bid to support demand recovery. Indonesia GDP posted contraction -2.19% YoY in Q4-2020, better compared to -3.49% in Q3-2020 that indicate recovering condition at the final quarter of 2020. Fund performance in February was supported by equity allocation that posted positive return, while the bond allocation posted negative return amid rising yield environment.
