Investment Manager Commentary

Asian stock markets posted positive performance in May; the global economic recovery, increased trading activity, and a weakening trend in the USD are supportive conditions for the Asian region, as they support Asian economies, which are predominantly manufacturing or commodity producers. Markit's Covid Containment Index predicts the relaxation of activity restrictions that will intensify in June – along with increased vaccinations – will have a positive impact on the economy. Portfolio allocation in health care and communication services contributed positive attribution, meanwhile allocation in consumer discretionary and IT contributed negative attribution to performance.
