Investment Manager Commentary

INDON concluded a positive performance in May. The stability in the UST yields which was triggered by further dovish Fed and solid demand in the UST auction helped boost INDON bond market. The view of some Fed members that the spike in inflation is to be transitory along with disappointing April non-farm payrolls data reinforces the view that Fed is still not going to change its policy in the near future. INDON 10-year yield fell to 2.26% from the previous month of 2.33%.
