Investment Manager Commentary

Global stock markets fluctuated in November overshadowed by various sentiments. Inflation concerns loomed over the market after several companies stated that production costs were rising faster than the prices of goods. Towards the end of the month concerns about the spread of a new variant of COVID-19 also weighed on sentiment. The World Health Organization said the new variant of COVID-19 is a risk to the world because of indications of a faster spread than previous variants. The minutes of the Fed's meeting indicated a balanced and flexible view of a potential rate hike. The board members emphasized that they will remain patient in paying attention to inflation data, but also open room for faster rate hikes if inflationary pressures are higher than expected. President Biden re-nominates Jerome Powell as Fed Chair.
