Investment Manager Commentary

Global markets posted positive performance in October, despite of concerns of inflation and global supply chain disruption. US inflation rose to 5.4% in September as supply has difficulties catching up with rising demand amid supply chain disruption. The Fed views rising inflation as temporary and inflation will moderate once supply chain issue improves. The Fed also signals that tapering is likely to begin in November. Meanwhile the market turned more positive as Q3 earnings report was above market expectation, overshadowing concern of supply chain disruption to the economy.
