Investment Manager Commentary

The Indonesia USD bond market was volatile. The positive driver in August came from both better global and local sentiments. From the global space, the US CPI print was lower than expected, recorded at 8.5% YoY in July (prev: 9.1% YoY), and was considered by the market as a confirmation that US inflation has peaked. Meanwhile Bank Indonesia's interest rate hike, BI's operation twist, the government's plan on narrowing fiscal deficit plan back to 3% threshold in 2023, and the issuance of the new benchmark bonds were the major drivers from the domestic side. Nevertheless, the market remained wary and looked forward to any sign of The Fed's policy stance from the Jackson Hole symposium towards the end of August. On his speech, Powell stated that the central bank would continue to combat inflation and higher interest rate would likely to stay for some time. There are indications that inflation may have peaked, but there are no indications of decline. Bank Indonesia raised benchmark rate by 25bps to 3.75% as pre-emptive move anticipating higher domestic inflation. Foreign investors booked a net buy of IDR8.27 trillion in August, while the yield curve showed a flattening pattern, with the short-end bond series underperformed the rest of the curve.
