Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia financial market was varied in April. Equity market posted positive performance, while the bond market fell, as a beneficiary of high commodity prices that contributes to improvement in Indonesia macroeconomic condition, a stark contrast to many other countries. Indonesia GDP expanded by 5.01% in Q1-2022 driven by strong exports and improving household consumption. Meanwhile the bond market fell as The Fed turns far more hawkish due to mounting concern over rising US inflation that hit the highest figure in the past 40 years. Russia - Ukraine geopolitical tension remains as negative sentiment as the spillover effect may disrupt global supply chain. The zero-covid policy by China also lead to global economic slowdown. On the positive side, S&P Ratings revised the outlook to Stable from Negative and affirms the Sovereign Credit Rating of the Republic of Indonesia at BBB. On monetary policy, Bank Indonesia has decided to hold the policy rate at 3.50%. Equity allocation in the portfolio supported performance in April.
