Investment Manager Commentary

Asia equity market was volatile in January, mainly affected by global sentiment. Uncertainty on The Fed's policy weighs on the market following The Fed's hawkish statement in early January that opens the possibility of rate hike in Q1-2022. The Fed also signals the possibility of unwinding its balance sheet (quantitative tightening). This policy uncertainty result in higher market volatility especially on growth stock such as technology sector. Meanwhile, China's policy is diverging from The Fed, by stepping up its effort in monetary easing following President Xi Jinping's direction to prioritize economic growth and stability in 2022. China central bank began cutting its benchmark rates in December, followed by another cut in January. Allocation in IT and real estate result in positive attribution for the portfolio while healthcare result in negative attribution.
