Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia's bond market weakened amidst uncertainties from geopolitical tension and The Fed's more aggressive approach in its monetary policy in May. 10Y bond yield rose as high as 7.41% before stabilizing to 7.04% at the end of the period, following the volatility in the UST which spiked to above 3.00% levels in the beginning of May. The Fed raised its interest rate by 50bps to 0.75%-1.00%, an effort to combat inflation. The Fed also announced plans to begin reducing its bond portfolio starting in June. Despite global uncertainties, the domestic factors remained supportive. The government confirmed that there would be no increase in the prices of subsidized fuel, LPG, and electricity in 2022 on the back of positive surprises on the government's revenue. On the monetary side, Bank Indonesia kept its rates steady at 3.50% to control inflation, maintain Rupiah's stability, and support economic growth, while announcing a more aggressive path of Reserve Requirement Ratio (RRR) hikes than previously planned. The yield curve varied, with short tenors yields declining while yields for medium long tenors have increased.
