Investment Manager Commentary

Indonesia equity posted positive performance in December buoyed by expectation that interest rate cut is coming in 2024 as US inflation and labor data continue to soften. The Fed's December FOMC forecast expects 75bps rate cut in 2024, more than previous forecast of 50bps rate cut. On the domestic front, macroeconomic condition remain stable. Headline inflation was down to 2.6% YoY in November from 2.9% YoY the previous month. Government spending was higher in December at IDR616 Trillion, more than double the spending in November of IDR270 trillion. This is positive as higher government spending can trickle down to the economy. Overall, in 2023 spending came in at approximately 100% of the government target while government revenue at 105% of target. The government posted a 1.65% of GDP budget deficit, much lower than its previous estimate at 2.3% of GDP. Portfolio allocations in consumer discretionary and materials contributed positive attributions, meanwhile allocations in IT and energy contributed negative attributions to performance.
