Investment Manager Commentary

Equity market posted negative return in November amid uncertainty of potential US policies under Trump and the outlook of Fed rate cut. Donald Trump's win in the US presidential election triggered USD appreciation and concern of tariff war. Trump's campaign rhetoric include raising tariff against China to 60% and universal tariff 10%-20% to other countries. Trump policies are seen as inflationary that could affect The Fed's rate cut outlook. On the domestic market, Bank Indonesia maintained BI Rate at 6% and emphasized its main policy focus is on Rupiah stability, citing risks from US policy changes under President Trump. Potential tax cuts and trade tariffs could increase inflation and lead to more gradual interest rate cuts by The Fed. Portfolio allocations in consumer staples contributed positive attributions, meanwhile allocations in real estate contributed negative attributions to performance.
