Investment Manager Commentary

Asia Pacific equities saw robust returns in October, outperforming developed markets. Market sentiment improved supported by easing US - China tension and optimism on AI in the technology sector. South Korea and Taiwan equities outperformed in the region, driven by the tech sector in the AI supply chain, following growing capex plan from big global technology companies on AI. Asian tech companies also reported positive 3Q earnings reports that drove market optimism. Specifically in South Korea, the market also buoyed by trade deal between US and South Korea that will reduce tariff imposed from 25% to 15%. Meanwhile Chinese equities were lower in October, due to tension between US and China regarding tighter export control on rare earth materials. However sentiment improved nearing end of month, as China reached deal with US to hold further escalation for a year. Portfolio allocations in IT contributed positive attributions, meanwhile allocations in industrials was detractor to performance.
