Investment Manager Commentary

Asia Pacific equities posted negative performance in March due to Iran war that pushes energy prices higher significantly and raises concern on oil supply issue. The Strait of Hormuz is effectively closed following the outbreak of the war, while it is one of the most important passageway for oil supply from the Gulf of Persia that accounts for about 20% of the world's oil supply. Brent oil prices rose 63% in the month to USD118 per barrel that pose risks to Asia that are net importer of oil and have large dependency on supply from the Middle East. Exposure of each countries are varied with countries such as Philippines and Japan have large exposure of oil imports share from the Middle East. Meanwhile some countries have sizeable oil reserves to manage risks in the short term. Outlook remains murky with duration of the war and oil price dynamics are the major factors impacting global inflation, economic growth and financial markets. Short-lived war is unlikely to significantly impact the economy, while lasting war and persistently high oil prices will cause more damage. Portfolio allocations in industrials contributed positive attributions, meanwhile allocations in consumer discretionary contributed negative attributions to performance.
