Investment Manager Commentary

Asia Pacific equities moved higher overall, although performance varied significantly across regions. Gains were driven primarily by North Asian markets, particularly Korea and Taiwan, where semiconductor demand remained strong. A number of better-than-expected earnings reports from U.S. technology companies, which fueled optimism that the growth of AI was beginning to create tangible profits, also buoyed investor sentiment. The positive environment unleashed a wave of speculative activity across the tech sector, leading to sizable gains for semiconductor and memory stocks worldwide. South Korea, which gained more than 30% for the month, was the most notable beneficiary of this trend. Elsewhere, China lagged due to weaker economic data and ongoing concerns around domestic demand. Meanwhile India remained broadly flat amid external headwinds and persistent high oil prices that risks inflation pressure and potential rate hike for the country. Portfolio allocations in materials contributed positive attributions, meanwhile allocations in IT contributed negative attributions to performance.
