Investment Manager Commentary

Asia-Pacific equities declined in September as surging oil prices, rising US Treasury yields and tighter global monetary conditions weighed on investor sentiment. Energy prices rose in the month amid deadlock in US-Iran negotiation and disruption in oil supply from Saudi Arabia. The Fed raised its policy rate by 25 bps, in line with expectations, while maintaining a hawkish stance and signaling the potential for further rate hikes. The 10-year US Treasury yield rose to 5.28%, its highest level since 2007, amid concerns over inflation, higher interest rates, and elevated US debt levels. Performance was divergent in the region, with energy-importing markets such as India and Southeast Asia faced stronger pressure from higher oil prices and capital outflows. Meanwhile, AI and semiconductor-related markets receiving some support from resilient technology demand. Technology-oriented markets including Korea and Taiwan benefited relatively from continued investor interest in AI and semiconductor-related companies. Portfolio allocations in consumer discretionary contributed positive attributions, meanwhile allocations in industrials contributed negative attributions to performance.
